Credit transfer and recognition of prior learning

In your experience, how well does the credit transfer and recognition of prior learning system operate in Australia? Does it adequately support students to move between courses or have their work experience recognised as part of a qualification? Are there ways it could be improved?

It could definitely be improved. I understand the fear of students being credited for skills learned in the workplace that no trained instructor has really been able to verify but real learning happens in the real world. Recognition of workplace learning needs to be reconsidered to be efficient and robust.

Work related training

What are the main reasons individuals and/or businesses do or do not participate in work-related training?

Do participate - the employer can train their own entry level employee from scratch
Don't participate - it's a lot of investment to train a young person and supervisors often do not have the time or skills.

What role, if any, should businesses be playing to address any barriers and better support the offer of work-related training to employees?

Private business should have a formal responsibility for workplace learning when the industry they operate in has a shortage of workers.

What, if anything, could government do to address barriers and better support the offer of work-related training to employees?

State and Federal departments of training or workforce development need to be much more 'hands on'. If an employer undertakes a school-based traineeship there are 5 stakeholders for the employer to manage - the trainee, the parents, the school, the RTO and the AASN. It's an administrative nightmare. The coordination of this admin needs to be covered by governments.

For employees/individuals, have you participated in any work-related training in the last 12 months that did not relate to general compliance (such as WHS)?

Yes

If yes, can you elaborate on the reasons for the training and any benefits you received from doing it?

Personal reasons - to advance my career. Organisational reasons - to increase my skills in a particular area. Some of this training was mandatory and paid for by my organisation but delivered by a professional organisation (AICD). This training helped me perform my own job better and will help me in future roles.
