

Dear Productivity Commission,

I am a single Australian who works full time in IT.

I dont know anyone who works or relies on the australian auto industry.

I think the auto industry is very vital to Australian pride and culture as a whole, i believe that without a auto industry alot of the new Australians growing up will miss out on the vital culture that having Australian automobile brand.

My Fathers first car was a Holden, my brothers first car was a Holden, my first car was a Holden and every other car is judged on the holden alternative.

Having an Australian made car makes me feel at home, its made for us, its made for you.

I feel there would not be a issue with the car industry if the cars were not so expensive. There used to be a day that a single male could buy a Holden on his part time job or apprenticeship, now we need to take out a bank loan, which alot of people dont.

Thank you.

Kind Regards,
Amelia McLeish
