

Dear Productivity Commission,

3 child family: under 7m, 2y5m & 14 years.

Mortgage & lower to middle class income.

Working on average 55+ hours.

The input on this makes it hard for me to fully express my feelings. I am using a smartphone.

Although I work in an industry that won't be directly affected, my family employs many people making many parts for companies making components for Holden & Toyota. Regardless of this it's easy to see that if Holden or Toyota leave many companies won't be able to keep their doors open either.

Many unemployed people in a short matter of time. Many factories closing doors.

Many unskilled people fighting for few jobs

V8 Supercars?

An Australian icon dead, a once was. The next generation wouldn't even have known existed.

Australia losing skill in the engineering sector

In the Ford / Holden argument I was always Ford till this moment. Cause it don't take a brain surgeon to see & surely even someone as childish as a politician to understand how much this will change alot in Australia in one foul swoop. My family will cease to manufacturer after 3 generations

Kind Regards,
Adam Rebbeck
