

Dear Productivity Commission,

I am a 75 year old retiree with 4 children and 3 grandchildren.

I have been concerned for years about the steady erosion of the Australian manufacturing sector.

There would be no direct affect, however the community ramifications after putting that number of workers out of work would be enomous

Apart from being a terrible blow to the Australian manufacturing industry, for an island nation to have no capacity to make vehicles would be bloody stupid

This is a very important issue. I am very happy to have my tax dollars spent on keeping a car manufacturing business alive and well in this great nation.

Kind Regards,
Geoff Podger
