

I am very concerned at plans to abolish territorial copyright for books in Australia. Territorial copyright is paramount for books I write and my intellectual property and without it I would be exposed to major threats to my basic rights as an author and to my income. To only be able to purchase overseas versions of Australian books written by my colleagues and myself would be a sad state of affairs for the Australian book industry. I call on the Productivity Commission to reject this proposal immediately.

Yours faithfully,
Corinne Fenton