

As an educational author I have a concern in any changes of distribution. My Australian publisher is also a "third party" overseas publisher. Should they decide to import my books from their overseas operation and then distribute them in Australia I can see my royalty income drop significantly and hence they win and I become the big loser. Will the customer get the book cheaper? Realistically, no. And the reason for the changes is... ?