

Mental Impairment

The DDA should spell out the definition of mental impairment. It should specifically define mental impairment.

The DDA as it stands today defines the term 'disability' as a 'physical or mental impairment and the long-term effect on his/her ability to carry out normal day-to-day activities'.

The above definition is not sufficient and should be spelt out.

Melville Miranda

VIC

Date: 21-6-03